OUR NEW GOVERNOR

William D. Denney Inaugurated at Dover on Tuesday

AN ELABORATE CELEBRATION

William D. Denney was inaugurated governor of Delaware, at noon Tuesday at the Dover Opera House, becoming the fifty-fourth chief executive of the State. The celebration was the most elaborate in recent years because of the guard of honor composed of ex-service men to the governor who enlisted in the army during the late war. Chief Justice Pennewill, of the Supreme Court, administered the oath upon the old Latin Bible published in 1532 and used by the majority of the governors of the State. Following the taking of the oath, Governor Denney delivered his inaugural address, following which he was the recipient of hearty congratulations. Seated on the platform with the governor were his wife, his aged parents, United States Senators Wolcott and Ball and Congressman Layton, members of the legislature, the governor's staff and other State officials.

Prior to the inaugural ceremonies, a large parade was held, with various clubs represented from all parts of the State. Lieutenant Governor J. Danforth Bush was given the oath in the State house Tuesday morning as was also Alden R. Benson, the new secretary of State. Mr. Bush addressed the members of the Senate after assuming office. The governor's reception took place Tuesday evening in the governor's parlors in the State house from 8 until 10 o'clock at which hundreds of persons passed before the receiving committee and were introduced to the governor and his party. Those who assisted the governor were his wife and mother, Mrs. L. Heisler Ball, Mrs. Daniel J. Layton, Jr., Mrs. J. Danforth Bush, Mrs. S. Warren Hall, Mrs. Walker L. Mifflin and Mrs. Watson Harrigan. The inaugural ball, which was as usual, one of the interesting events of the inauguration, was attended by hundreds of people, many, however, because of the limited space in the State armory being unable to gain admittance.

ST. ANNE'S CHURCH NOTES

EPISCOPAL

Sunday, January 23d, 1921. Septuagesima Sunday.

Services: 10.30. Morning prayer and sermon.

11.45. Sunday School.

7.30. Evening prayer and address.

Meetings: The Parish Guild will meet at the Rectory on Thursday afternoon, at two o'clock.

The Joint Diocesan Board of Sunday School Lessons will meet at the Church House, Philadelphia, Pa., on Wednesday and Thursday, Jan. 26th and 27th. The Rt. Rev. Bishop of the Diocese has appointed the Rev. T. G. Hill, of Smyrna, and the Rector of St. Anne's as Diocesan representatives for the fourth consecutive year.

Jan. 25th. The Feast of the Conversion of St. Paul Acts IX:3, 4. "And suddenly there shined round about him a light from heaven. And he fell to the earth."

This feast is worthily placed next to the Epiphany, for it commemorates the manifestation of Christ to one who was at first a great persecutor, and afterward a great teacher and leader of the Christians. It pleased the Lord to make himself known to Saul in a wonderful manner, at the very time when he was breathing out threatenings and slaughter against the disciples. His eyes were blinded, but his soul was enlightened; and henceforth he himself became willing to suffer all things, even unto death, in behalf of the Master whom he had despised, and whose followers he had pursued with such cruel hatred. LENT: Begins on February 9th, (Ash Wednesday). Prepare now to keep this season of penitence by declining invitations to social functions. Never mind what others do. As Bishop Woodcock (of Kentucky) says, "the average churchman is about as good as an average egg." Be strictly first class!

The Rector wishes to thank all those who have paid up their pledges for Missions and those who continue their weekly pledges. Last year the parish sent $263.00 for the general missionary work of the church; $50.00 for Diocesan Missions; $131.28 for the Church Pension Fund; $287.00 for the Relief of the Starving Children in Europe; $21.06 for the Babies' Hospital and Day Nursery; $100.00 for Bishopstead Improvement.

NEW CENTURY CLUB MEETING

Mrs. H. D. Boyer, State President of the Federation of Women's Clubs, gave a very interesting and instructive talk to the New Century Club, of Middletown, Tuesday afternoon, and it was greatly enjoyed by all.

A resolution was passed by the members of the New Century Club giving authority to Mrs. C. B. Green to vote on the bond issue of New Castle County, authorizing the borrowing of $1,000,000 for school purposes, for the corporation, at the election which was held on January 20th.

An appreciative letter from the Dover Century Club was read with the enclosed newspaper clipping as follows:

"A perfect feast of music was enjoyed by the ladies of the Dover Century Club, on Wednesday, January 12, when the Middletown Club furnished the program. Miss Frances W. Watkins, who studied under Prof. Van Westernhagen and has for two years played with Wm. Schmidt, head of the 'cello division of the Philadelphia Orchestra, gave a recital in which her interpretation of the great masters left no doubt as to her right to be called a real artist."

The program attested the variety and beauty of her selection; accompanying Miss Watkins were: Mrs. C. E. Pool, president of the New Century Club, of Middletown; Mrs. C. S. Green, chairman of program; Mrs. Lee Sparks Mrs. Watson K. Betts, Mrs. Robert R. Gabriel, Mrs. Lee Pennington, Mrs. George Heldmyer, Mrs. John Heldmyer, Jr. and Mrs. S. G. Sutton. Refreshments of sandwiches, coffee and candied grapefruit were served.

Want Oyster Law Repealed

The Delaware Legislature, at its present session, will be asked to repeal an old oyster law, passed years ago, which has caused a loss to the State of million of dollars. This law has to do with the taking of oysters from the Delaware waters in that it only allows any one person to have in his possession at any one time more than twelve bushels of oysters. This applies to dealers and those engaged in catching the bivalves the same as it does to the individual. The law does not apply to Delaware bay, where it is lawful for taking and planting oysters in any quantity from April 15 to July 1. The result of this law is that the oyster grounds in the rivers and creeks of the State are now teeming with oysters, thousands of bushels of which are virtually worthless, because of the fact that the bivalves have remained on the bottom of the creek so long that they have become clustered and bunched together to such an extent that they are not good for shipping purposes.

MIDDLETOWN TRANSCRIPT $1 PER YEAR

RURAL CARRIER EXAMINATION

The United States Civil Service Commission has announced an examination for the County of New Castle, Del., to be held at Townsend, New Castle, Newark and Wilmington on Feb. 26, 1921 to fill the position of motor rural carrier at Townseed and vacancies that may later occur on motor rural routes from post offices in the county named.

The salary on motor routes ranges from $2,450 to $2,600 a year.

The examination will be open only to citizens who are actually domiciled in the territory supplied with mail by a post office in the county and who meet the other requirements set forth in Forms 2121 and 1977. Form 2121 may be seen posted at any post office in the county for which the examination is held, and Form 1977 and application blanks may be obtained from the offices at which the vacancy exists and where the examination is to be held, or from the United States Civil Service Commission at Washington, D. C.

Both men and women, if qualified, may enter this examination, but appointing officers have the legal right to specify the sex desired in requesting certification of eligibles. Women will not be considered for rural carrier appointment unless they are the widows of U. S. soldiers, sailors, or marines, or are the wives of U. S. soldiers, sailors, or marines who are physically disqualified for all examinations by reason of injuries received in the line of military duty.

$1,000,000 SCHOOL BOND

The Voters of New Castle County Give Majority of 8,000

The vote in rural New Castle county Thursday for a bond issue of $1,000,000 for school buildings and equipment, indicated when the count of the votes ended late Thursday night, a victory for the affirmative. Twenty-four of the largest districts out of the eighty-two, gave a majority in favor of the bond issue of 8277. The total vote counted was, for the bond, 34,638; against, 26,560.

As the vote counted, comprises all the towns and those to be counted are but the very small communities, there was no doubt in the mind of Wilbur H. Jump, County School Superintendent at midnight, that the result will remain the same although the figures might undergo a slight change.

"It is very encouraging," said Mr. Jump, after the figures had been tabulated and counted. "The affirmative has a lead that is substantial enough to banish any fear. There will be no change in the final result."

STEP TO HELP SCHOOLS

The vote in favor of the $1,000,000 bond issue marks another step forward in the improvement of school conditions in Delaware, the change subject to some differences of opinion in the school laws of the State, while as to certain details, being the first significant sign that the people of Delaware are awakening to the educational needs of the children of the State.

It is understood that while the vote authorizes a bond issue of $1,000,000 and empowers the county Board of Education to advertise the bonds for sale, the bonds will not all be offered at one time, but in blocks as funds are needed to carry out the comprehensive plan of the board of re-building and improving the rural schools.

The Voice of the Pack

By EDISON MARSHALL

Copyright, 1920, by Little, Brown & Co

CRANSTON SEES RED.

Synopsis.—Warned by his physician that he has not more than six months to live, Dan Failing sits despondently on a park bench, wondering where he should spend those six months. Memories of his grandfather and a deep love for all things of the wild help him in reaching a decision. In a large southern Oregon city he meets people who had known and loved his grandfather, a famous frontiersman. He makes his home with Silas Lennox, a typical westerner. The only other members of the housenold are Lennox's son, "Bill," and daughter, "Snowbird." Their abode is in the Umpqua divide, and there Failing plans to live out the short span of life which he has been told is his. From the first Failing's health shows a marked improvement, and in the companionship of Lennox and his son and daughter he fits into the woods life as if he had been born to it. By quick thinking and a remarkable display of "nerve" he saves Lennox's life and his own when they are attacked by a mad coyote. Lennox declares he is a reincarnation of his grandfather, Dan Failing I, whose fame as a woodsman is a household word. Dan learns that an organized band of outlaws, of which Bert Cranston is the leader, is setting forest fires. Landry Hildreth, a former member of the gang, has been induced to turn state's evidence.

"He's got a cabin over toward the marshes, and it has come to me that he's going to start tomorrow, or maybe has already started today, down into the valley to give his evidence. Of course, that is deeply confidential between you and me. If the gang knew about it, he'd never get through the thickets alive."

But Dan was hardly listening. His attention was caught by the hushed, intermittent sounds that are always to be heard, if one listens keenly enough, in the wilderness at night. "I wish the pack would sound again," he said. "I suppose it was hunting."

"Of course. And there is no living thing in these woods that can stand against a wolf pack in its full strength."

"Except man, of course."

"A strong man, with an accurate rifle, of course, and except possibly in the starving times in winter he'd never have to fight them. All the beasts of prey are out tonight. You see, Dan, when the moon shines, the deer feed at night instead of in the twilights and the dawn. And of course the wolves and the cougars hunt the deer. It may be that they are running cattle, or even sheep."

But Dan's imagination was afire. He wasn't content yet. "They couldn't be—hunting man?" he asked.

"No. If it was midwinter and the pack was starving, we'd have to listen better. It always looked to me as if the wild creatures had a law against killing men, just as humans have. They've learned it doesn't pay—something the wolves and bears of Europe and Asia haven't found out. The naturalists say that the reason is rather simple—that the European peasant, his soul scared out of him by the government he lived under, has always fled from wild beasts. They were tillers of the soil, and they carried hoes instead of guns. They never put the fear of God into the animals and as a result there are quite a number of true stories about tigers and wolves that aren't pleasant to listen to. But our own frontiersmen were not men to stand any nonsense from wolves or cougars. They had guns, and they knew how to use them. And they were preceded by as brave and as warlike a race as ever lived on the earth—armed with bows and arrows. Any animal that hunted men was immediately killed, and the rest found out it didn't pay.

"Just as human beings have found out the same thing—that it doesn't pay to hunt their fellow men. The laws of life as well as the laws of nations are against it."

But the words sounded weak and dim under the weight of the throbbing darkness; and Dan couldn't get away from the idea that the codes of life by which most men lived were forgotten quickly in the shadows of the pines. Even as he spoke, man was hunting man on the distant ridge where Whisperfoot the cougar had howled.

Bert Cranston, head of the arson ring that operated on the Umpqua divide, was not only beyond the pale in regard to the laws of the valleys, but he could have learned valuable lessons from the beasts in regard to keeping the laws of the hills. The moon looked down to find him waiting on a certain trail that wound down to the settlements, his rifle loaded and ready for another kind of game than deer or wolf. He was waiting for Landy Hildreth; and the greeting he had for him was to destroy all chances of the prosecuting attorney in the valley below learning certain names that he particularly wanted to know.

There was no breath of wind. The great pines, tall and dark past belief, stood absolutely motionless, like strange pillars of ebony. Bert Cranston knelt in a brush covert, his rifle loaded and ready in his lean, dark hands.

No wolf that ran the ridges, no cougar that waited on the deer trails knew a wilder passion, a more terrible blood-lust than he. It showed in his eyes, narrow and never resting from their watch of the trail: it was in his posture; and it revealed itself unmistakably in the curl of his lips. Something like hot steam was in his brain, blurring his sight and heating his blood.

The pine needles hung wholly motionless above his head; but yet the dead leaves on which he knelt crinkled and rustled under him. Only the keenest ear could have heard the sound; and possibly in his madness, Cranston himself was not aware of it. And one would have wondered a long time as to what caused it. It was simply that he was shivering all over with hate and fury.

A twig cracked, far on the ridge above him. He leaned forward, peering, and the moonlight showed his face in unsparing detail. It revealed the deep lines, the terrible, drawn lips, the ugly hair long over the dark ears. His strong hands tightened upon the breech of the rifle. His wiry figure grew tense.

Of course it wouldn't do to let his prey come too close. Landy Hildreth was a good shot too, young as Cranston, and of equal strength; and no sporting chance could be taken in this hunting. Cranston had no intention of giving his enemy even the slightest chance to defend himself. If Hildreth got down into the valley, his testimony would make short work of the arson ring. He had the goods; he had been a member of the disreputable crowd himself.

The man's steps were quite distinct by now. Cranston heard him fighting his way through the brush thickets, and once a flock of grouse, frightened from their perches by the approaching figure, flew down the trail in front. Cranston pressed back the hammer of his rifle. The click sounded loud in the silence. He had grown tense and still, and the leaves no longer rustled.

His eyes were intent on a little clearing, possibly one hundred yards up the trail. The trail itself went straight through it. And in an instant more, Hildreth pushed through the buckbrush and stood revealed in the moonlight.

If there is one quality that means success in the mountains it is constant, unceasing self-control. Cranston thought that he had it. But perhaps he had waited too long for Hildreth to come; and the strain had told on him. He had sworn to take no false steps; that every motion he made should be cool and sure. He didn't want to attract Hildreth's attention by any sudden movement. All must be cautious and stealthy. But in spite of all these good resolutions, Cranston's gun simply leaped to his shoulder in one convulsive motion at the first glimpse of his enemy as he emerged into the moonlight.

The end of the barrel struck a branch of the shrubbery as it went up. It was only a soft sound; but in the utter silence it traveled far. The gun barrel caught the moonlight as it leaped, and Hildreth saw its glint in the darkness.

He was looking for trouble. He had dreaded this long walk to the settlements more than any experience of his life. He didn't know why the letter he had written, asking for an armed escort down to the courts, had not brought results. But it was wholly possible that Cranston would have answered this question for him. This same letter had fallen into a certain soiled, deadly pair of hands which was the last place in the world that Hildreth would have chosen, and it had been all the evidence that was needed, at the meeting of the ring the night before, to adjudge Hildreth a merciless and immediate end. Hildreth would have preferred to wait in the hills and possibly to write another letter, but a chill that kept growing at his finger tips forbade it. And all these things combined to stretch his nerves almost to the breaking point as he stole along the moonlit trail under the pines.

A moment before the rush and whir of the grouse flock had dried the roof of his mouth with terror. The tall trees appalled him, the shadows fell upon his spirit. And when he heard this final sound, when he saw the glint that might so easily have been a gun-barrel, his nerves and muscles reacted at once. Not even a fraction of a second intervened. His gun flashed up and a little, angry cylinder of flame darted, as a snake's head darts, from the muzzle.

Hildreth didn't take aim. There wasn't time. The report roared in the darkness; the bullet sang harmlessly and thudded into the earth; and both of them were the last things in the world that Cranston had expected. And they were not a moment too soon. Even at that instant, his finger was closing down upon the trigger, Hildreth standing clear and revealed through the sights. The nervous response that few men in the world would be self-disciplined enough to prevent occurred at the same instant that he pressed the trigger. His own fire answered, so near to the other that both of them sounded as one report.

Most hunters can usually tell, even if they cannot see their game fall, whether they have hit or missed. This was one of the few times in his life that Cranston could not have told. He knew that as his finger pressed he had held as accurate a "bead" as at any time in his life. He did not know still another circumstance—that in the moonlight he had overestimated the distance to the clearing, and instead of one hundred yards it was scarcely fifty. He had held rather high. And he looked up, unknowing whether he had succeeded or whether he was face to face with the prospect of a duel to the death in the darkness.

And all he saw was Hildreth, rocking back and forth in the moonlight—a strange picture that he was never entirely to forget. It was a motion that no man could pretend. And he knew he had not missed.

He waited till he saw the form of his enemy rock down, face half-buried in the pine needles. It never even occurred to him to approach to see if he had made a clean kill. He had held on the breast and he had a world of confidence in his great, shocking, big-game rifle. Besides, the rifle fire might attract some hunter in the hills; and there would be time in the morning to return to the body and make certain little investigations that he had in mind. And running back down the trail, he missed the sight of Hildreth dragging his wounded body, like an injured hare, into the shelter of the thickets.

Whisperfoot, that great coward, came out of his brush-covert when the moon rose. It was not his usual rising time. Ordinarily he found his best hunting in the eerie light of the twilight hour; but for certain reasons, his knowledge of which would be extremely difficult to explain, he let this time go by in slumber. Whisperfoot had slept almost since dawn. It is a significant quality in the felines that they simply cannot keep in condition without hours and hours of sleep. In this matter of sleeping, they are in a direct contrast to the wolves, who seemingly never sleep at all, unless it is with one eye open, and in still greater contrast to the king of all beasts, the elephant, who is said to slumber less per night than that great electrical wizard whom all men know and praise.

The great cat came out yawning, as graceful a thing as treads upon the earth. He was almost nine feet long from the tip of his nose to the end of his tail, and he weighed as much as many a full-grown man. He stood and yawned insolently, for all the forest world to see. He rather hoped that the chipmunk, staring with beady eyes from his doorway, did see him. He would just as soon that Woof's little son, the bear cub, should see him too. But he wasn't so particular about Woof himself, or the wolf pack whose song had just wakened him. And above all things, he wanted to keep out of the sight of men.

Whisperfoot stalks new game.

NUMEROUS PHASES OF LIFE

Existence May be Likened, with Considerable Truth, to Any One of Many Things.

Life, says the Ladies' Home Journal, is very much like a savings account in the bank. You get out all you put into it, and considerable interest besides.

A winding country road. Although one cannot see far ahead, zest is given to the journey by the fact that something new and interesting will be revealed at every turn of the road.

The new spring bonnet. A great deal of its charm depends on the kind of a face that peeps out beneath it.

An old-fashioned quilt. Requires both light and dark patches to carry out the design successfully.

Your wife. You find it very trying at times, but all things considered, you would not want to do without it.

An education. In order to make it really worth while one must share it with others.

A garment. It has its seamy side, but it is not policy to wear it inside out.

That's the Way It Is.

BLOUSE IS USEFUL

Costume Garment Most Woefully Abused, Writer Declares.

Prominent Part of Outfit Seldom Worn Properly—So That It Looks Entirely Right.

One of the most useful garments under the sun is the costume blouse, and one of the most woefully abused, says a fashion correspondent. Do you often see it worn properly? Few are the times when it looks entirely right—of the same family as the rest of the costume of which it has become a part.

It will be a dreadful blow to some women to be told that the costume blouse is not really smart when it is worn with a suit skirt. It is all right when the coat is buttoned in place, but when that outer covering is removed, how different! This costume blouse has its place, to be sure, but it is not with the tailored or even the semi-tailored suit. There only the tailored blouse or the soft, hand-made French blouse has a rightful place and a sufficient reason to call itself a part of the whole.

There is the blouse made of an all-over brocade or of an all-over piece of embroidery. It is one of the handsomest that has been produced in this most prolific season, and it is apt to be made over quite plain and simple lines, with no added trimming. It comes in the most beautiful and rich colors, and it should most properly be worn with a skirt that is low in tone, soft in texture and full enough in width to make it a graceful foundation for the brilliance of the waist.

There is no question that the blouse type of frock is one of the most economical of the varieties of costuming that can be gained by the aid of one simple skirt. But that is no reason, surely, why the thing should be done badly and why the wrong blouse should be combined with the wrong skirt. The blouse, in other words, should be used to the full value of its design and should never be allowed to be that thing which is just thrown on to make something that "will do."

Henna and Gray.

Henna and gray, separately or in combination, are important colors.

CHARMING SET OF RED FOX

A set of red fox is smart for the young girl's tailleur and is one of the fashions of the present season.

FEW ALL WHITE LACE FROCKS

Dyed Decorations Favored, Cream Tints, Tan, Ecru and Tobacco Brown Predominating.

It is a lace season, no doubt of that, but rarely does one see a perfectly white lace frock. Laces are dyed now in the most entrancing shades and most favored are cream tints, tan, ecru and tobacco brown. Black lace is used extensively and there are exquisitely lovely laces in peach tint. These last are mounted over pastel silk or satin for dance frocks. Chantilly lace and net laces are dyed navy blue, plum or brown for afternoon costumes and some of these laces are sewed with self-color spangles that give a very rich and brilliant effect. A charming frock is of accordion plaited brown satin, the plaited skirt edged with brown dotted net. A sash of the dotted net, with huge, airy loops, is tied around the waist. The bodice and sleeves are of the brown satin without net trimming.

VELVET FOR MIDDY BLOUSES

Fabric Among Other Favorites for Construction of the Popular and Seasonable Garment.

In the lineup of separate middy garments a great many fabrics are approved. Serge and flannel, of course, are staple and always good style, and this season wool jersey cloth and velveteen middies to be worn with either plain or plaid wool separate skirts are in high favor. Crepe de chine is also frequently used.

One very smart little black velveteen smock recently featured with a plaid wool skirt was drawn in a trifle at the waistline on either side and caught with a silk cord and tassel.

Touches of wool embroidery in contrasting color trim the wood jersey blouses, or else they are finished all about the edges with bands of heavy wool crochet, the same material frequently being used to form a belt.

Pressing Tucks.

To press tucks so they may look decorative and not have the usual flattened appearance, stand the iron up on end and run the tucks over the iron, holding the material firmly between the hands with the tucks running downward. In this way the material between and beneath the tucks will be pressed as well as the tucks.

EASIER TO MAKE WEARABLES

Numerous Articles of Apparel Only Partially Completed May Be Obtained and Finished at Home.

Many women try to make some of their clothes themselves. This is difficult for anybody not trained to sew a fine seam, and few of us do know how to sew well nowadays. But there are so many things half made, or so many parts of things ready made that one may buy in the shops that it is worth while making use of these things to help out on the difficult task of home sewing.

For one thing, there are ready-made linings for bodices, in white and black, in muslin and in net. These are a great help, for they give the foundation of the frock ready to start on.

There are hat linings, varying in price from a thin silk and cotton one at about 40 cents to a stiff taffeta one at a dollar.

There are lace petticoat ruffles, all ready to sew on a muslin foundation.

There are silk petticoat ruffles, equally ready to sew into place on a new or old petticoat foundation.

There are half-made skirts—semi-made, that is, far more than half-made. They need only seaming up and finishing off. They come in plaid wool, in plaited silk or in tailored finish in different fabrics.

There are net overdresses that need only the making of a satin or georgette slip to convert them into charming evening frocks.

There are girdles of ribbon, with long silk fringes that add a finish to any gown.

There are all sorts of lovely neckwear that make the finishing off of the neck of a gown an easy matter.

With all these things to help one out, the matter of making clothes is not so difficult, even if you don't know much about sewing.

Darning Hint.

If the children wear great holes in their stockings, or, perchance, you yourself have more than you wish, paste strips of soft material or little pieces of velvet inside the heels of shoes and you will have fewer holes to darn.

COLORS—TO BE OR NOT TO BE

Black and White Leaping Into the Foreground in Contrast With Brighter Hues.

One has ceased to wonder about the length of skirts, for the great couturiers and the great feminine public have given convincing proof that they are to remain either decidedly short, or uneven of border, touching the ankle on one side, perhaps, but most certainly clearing it by twelve to fourteen inches on the other, says Harper's Bazar.

About the corsage, as well, one has ceased to wonder; it is for the coming season to be long and slender with ceinture dropped two inches or more below the normal waistline. But one does wonder, and arduously, about colors. We have reveled for months in all the vibrant hues of the Chinese rainbow, in the primitive reds, blues and yellows of ancient Greece and Etruria, in the sinister yet fascinating greens and saffrons of buried Egypt. "Can the modern psychology stand an uninterrupted orgy of riotous colors?" the great creators ask themselves. Very evidently they think not, for while still putting forth gorgeously hued gowns and cloaks, chapeaux and garnitures, they are projecting at the same time some very attractive confections in black and white.

Strange to say, this combination finds expression almost altogether in the field of sports, and when one stops to think of it, the magpie colors would be very effective against a background of snow, bare branches and evergreen, and framing a lovely face glowing from nipping winds and the excitement of the open.

Stylish Silhouettes.

There are two distinct silhouettes in vogue at the moment, the straight and narrow, and the wide bouffant full skirt which may have also a distended hip.

Ostrich Collars and Cuffs.

Ostrich feather collars and cuffs made of ostrich tips are featured on many evening wraps.

ABLE TO DO HER WORK

After Long Suffering Mrs. Siefert Was Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Pottsville, Pa.—"I suffered with female trouble for four or five years and was very irregular. I was not fit to do my work at times and took medicine from a doctor and got no benefit. I saw Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound advertised in the newspapers and took it and got all right. I gained twenty pounds or more and am now able to do my work. I recommend the Vegetable Compound to my friends and you may use these facts as a testimonial."—Mrs. SALLIE SIEFERT, 813 W. Fourth Street, Pottsville, Pa.

The everyday life of many housewives is a continual struggle with weakness and pain. There is nothing more wearing than the ceaseless round of household duties and they become doubly hard when some female trouble makes every bone and muscle ache, and nerves all on edge.

If you are one of these women do not suffer for four or five years as Mrs. Siefert did, but profit by her experience and be restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

HOW DOCTORS TREAT COLDS AND THE FLU

First Step in Treatment Is a Brisk Purgative With Calotabs, the Purified and Refined Calomel Tablets that are Nausealess, Safe and Sure.

Doctors have found by experience that no medicine for colds and influenza can be depended upon for full effectiveness until the liver is made thoroughly active. That is why the first step in the treatment is the new, nausealess colomel tablets called Calotabs, which are free from the sickening and weakening effects of the old style calomel. Doctors also point out the fact that an active liver may go a long way towards preventing influenza and is one of the most important factors in enabling the patient to successfully withstand an attack and ward off pneumonia.

One Calotab on the tongue at bed time with a swallow of water—that's all. No salts, no nausea nor the slightest interference with your eating, pleasure or work. Next morning your cold has vanished, your liver is active, your system is purified, and you are feeling fine, with a hearty appetite for breakfast. Druggists sell Calotabs only in original sealed packages, price thirty-five cents. Your money will be cheerfully refunded if you do not find them delightful.—(Adv.)

Has a cold, grip, or other infectious disease sapped your strength? Do you suffer backache, lack ambition, feel dull and depressed? Look to your kidneys! Physicians agree that kidney trouble often results from infectious disease. If your back is bad, your kidneys act irregularly, and you feel all run down, use Doan's Kidney Pills. Doan's have helped thousands. Ask your neighbor!

PROMOTION IN THE KINGDOM.

LESSON TEXT—Matt. 20:17-28.

GOLDEN TEXT—The Son of Man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give His life a ransom for many.—Matt. 20:28.

REFERENCE MATERIAL—Matt. 19:27-20:16; Mark 10:32-45; Luke 22:24-30.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Wanting More Than Our Share.

JUNIOR TOPIC—How to Win First Place.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Right and Wrong Ambitions.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Greatness Through Service.

I. Jesus Foretells His Death and Resurrection.

1. The King on His way to Jerusalem (vv. 17-19). This is His last journey to the beloved city. He took the twelve disciples aside from the group of traveling pilgrims to make known unto them what was before them. On the journey He went ahead of the disciples. The courage thus shown by the Lord amazed the disciples who were following in fear (Mark 10:32). "Christ, the conscious and certain sufferer, is courageous. His followers who had nothing to fear were afraid."

2. Betrayal and death foretold (vv. 18, 19). He went forward fully conscious of the awful tragedy of the cross. He for the third time since the transfiguration tells the disciples of His suffering and death, but they are so filled with their ambitious schemes that they do not understand Him. The treachery of Judas Iscariot; the fierce persecutions of the chief priests and scribes; the unjust judgment; the delivery to Pontius Pilate; the mocking; the scourging; the crown of thorns; the cross; the hanging between two malefactors; the nails; the spear; all were spread before His mind like a picture. Though He knew all this He deliberately pressed on. The joyous outlook upon the victory which would be accomplished by the shedding of His blood led Him forward. He went courageously, for He knew the time had come for the accomplishment of His Father's will.

3. The resurrection foretold (v. 19). Truly this would have been a dark picture had the resurrection not been made known. The resurrection life beyond is always seen as the issue of the cross. The blessedness of the life beyond this "vale of tears" should urge us on. In this we have Christ as the great example (Heb. 12:2).

II. The Ambitious Request of James and John (vv. 20-23).

1. The request (vv. 20, 21). This request was made by their mother. The request is for a place of prominence in the kingdom. It is right for mothers to be ambitious for their boys, but they should know that earth's pinnacles are exceedingly dangerous. It is very desirable that we get places for our children near Jesus, but we should keep out of our minds the vanity of the world.

2. Jesus' answer. (vv. 22, 23). He spoke directly to the men, not to their mother, declaring that they knew not what they were asking. He showed them that the way to this position of glory was through suffering. The cup of which they were to drink was that of great suffering and agony. The positions which they craved were attainable, but in a very different way from what they apprehended. The way to the places of glory in the kingdom of Christ is through the path of lowly and self-forgetful service, even great suffering.

3. How to Be Truly Exalted (vv. 24-28).

1. The angry disciples (v. 24). When the ten heard of the request of James and John they were filled with indignation against them. Their displeasure did not arise from the fact that they were free from the same selfish spirit, but that these two had thrust themselves to the front; it was an admixture of indignation and jealousy.

2. Greatness among the heathen (v. 25). The rule of the world has always been by the strong hand. The standards have been not moral excellence, but wealth, station and power. Even today the reason one nation rules the other is that the one possesses sharper swords and heavier clubs than the other.

3. Greatness among Christ's disciples (vv. 26, 27). Here the standard is in sharp contrast. The way to the places of prominence in Christ's kingdom is the way of self-abasement, It is not wrong to be ambitious to be great, but the basis of true greatness is that which human selfishness seeks to avoid. There will be degrees of rank in Christ's kingdom, but this rank will be character, not position or authority. The spirit of Christ substitutes "the greatness of love for the love of greatness." This greatness is not won at the expense of others.

4. Christ is the supreme example of greatness (v. 28). All who would be great should study and imitate Christ. Let them forget self and serve others, even to give their lives. This will eliminate all scrambling for place and power. The one grand test by which to know whether Christ's Spirit controls one is whether he is serving or seeking to be served.

God Will Keep You.

There is nothing in what has befallen or befalls you which justifies impatience or peevishness. God is inscrutable, but not wrong. Remember if the cloud is over you that there is a bright light always on the other side; also, that the time is coming, either in this world or in the next, when that cloud will be swept away, and the fullness of God's light and wisdom poured around you. If your life is dark, then walk by faith; and God is pledged to keep you as safe as if you could understand everything. —Horace Bushnell.

SWEATERS ADOPT QUIET COLORS

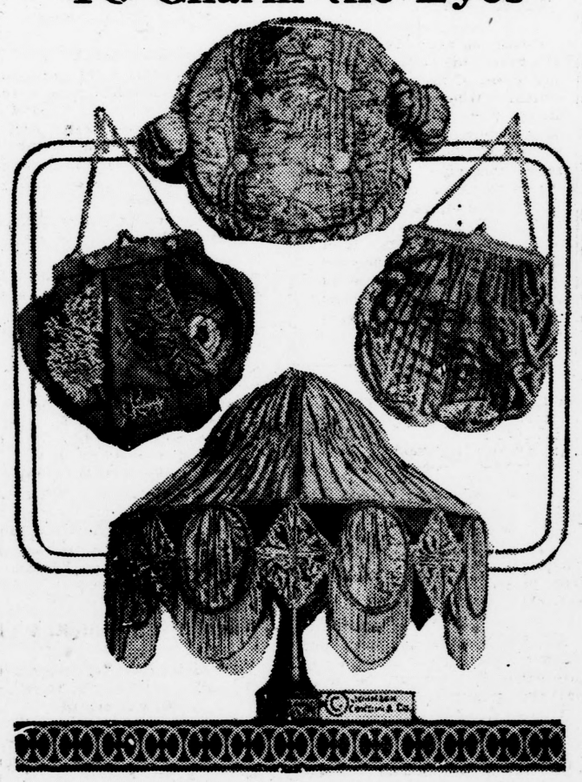
IF THIS were a dustless and smokeless world nearly all gentlewomen would probably go clad in white the greater part of the time, for there is nothing that suits them quite so well. In clothes made for wear in those sunny resorts along the clean sands that border the sea we find them fairly reveling in white apparel of every character; and even sport clothes this year have swung away from vivid colors to white, or white with a dash of color thrown in. Such colors as are used are not so vivid as they were, at that.

This trend of the styles toward white and quiet tones is very noticeable in sweaters and sweater coats, where, heretofore there has been abundance of strong color. In the new displays white leads off in the most beautiful of garments and in its company are white and black combinations, followed by white and pale gold, white and emerald green, white and deep beige, white and soft purple.

Where white is not chosen tan, beige and taupe are considered, sometimes in combination with the same livelier colors that are found with white, and often with quieter tones. A typical example of good style in sweaters appears in the knitted coat sweater in tan, shown in the picture, with bands of brown angora finishing the sleeves, facing the front of the garment and forming the collar.

The descendants of the original sweater are many and varied. There is a wide difference between them and their ancestors for the element of style has grown more and more important as these garments become more and more essential in the wardrobe. Style, in fact, counts for more than anything else in those models made of silk yarn, and the most interesting thing about them this season is the marvelous knitting revealed in stitches that are managed with amazing ingenuity.

To Charm the Eyes



A GREAT many of the small ornamental furnishings that give a house its homey flavor are made of silk and satin either in the piece or in ribbons. Ribbons are more conveniently used for small furnishings—as candle and lamp shades, telephone screens, cushions, baskets and all the belongings of the dressing table, because of their finished edges and highly ornamental character. Glass foundations covered with ribbon make the loveliest of powder dishes or powder bowls, bonbon dishes and vases.

A few late examples of the ribbon worker's art appear in the picture above, which includes a pillow made of plain and braided ribbons. Lengths of the brocaded pattern are joined with shirrings to form the top and bottom of the covering and a puff of plain satin ribbon extends about the sides. Odd handles are fashioned of the plain ribbon also—offering a new feature in pillows—and four buttons set on the cover are covered with the plain ribbon.

The handsome lamp shade tells its own story, except that the photograph cannot portray the lovely color values and richness of ribbon medallions set about it and finished with chenille fringe. A very wide and soft brocaded ribbon covers the top of the shade in four sections, separated by gold braid.

Two shopping bags are shown, one of black satin in a heavy quality with silk and gold motifs, one of the richest patterns in ribbon of this kind, and the other of plain and figured ribbon is stitched in narrow tucks for the front and back of the bag for which the figured ribbon provides a series of puffs about the sides. These bags are lined with plain satin.

MORE GOOD THINGS.

Sometime when preparing the common meal of baked potatoes with codfish gravy, make the gravy using sour cream instead of milk or cream. The flavor is especially good and appropriate with the fish.

Roasted Chickens With Sausage.—Truss two chickens for roasting, lay a slice of fat salt pork over the breasts of each and cook two hours in a moderate oven, basting often. About 20 minutes before the time is up, set small, flat sausages into the oven to cook, turning them often until well browned. Serve the chickens garnished with the sausages and accompanied with Convent Cakes.—Mix the yolks of six eggs with two cupfuls of fine granulated sugar. Beat the whites to a froth, adding while beating one-half a pound of almonds, blanched and ground in a nut mill, or almond paste may be substituted. When the egg whites and nuts have been beaten stiff, mix with the beaten yolks and sugar and one scant cupful of pastry flour, the grated rind of two lemons, and one-fourth of a cupful of citron, sliced very thin and chopped. Put the mixture into small cake pans, filling half full; bake in a quick oven, turn out on a baking sheet and place in the oven to brown the bottoms.

Chicken Toscana.—Truss a chicken for roasting and put into a deep saucepan, the bottom of which is covered with slices of bacon. Chop the following together and lay over the fowl: One onion, one carrot, one stalk of celery, the heart, liver and gizzard of the fowl and one good slice of smoked ham. Cover and cook over the fire until the bacon is melted and browned. Add enough rich meat stock to half-cover the fowl; cover the sauce-pan and cook in a slow oven until quite tender. Before sending to the table add one-fourth of a cupful of tomato sauce mixed with chopped mushrooms.

Tomato Sauce.—Add a slice of onion, a few peppercorns, a piece of green pepper and bit of bay leaf to a quart of tomatoes. Cook for half an hour, strain and add a tablespoonful each of butter and flour creamed together. Cook until smooth.

There is one quality which all men have, in common with the angels, and blessed opportunities of exercising if they will—mercy.—Dickens.

THE LEFTOVER PROBLEM.

At this season of the year when the gathering of the clans means a variety of leftovers, it is necessary that the housewife should put extra thought on how to serve them attractively.

One may prepare croquettes, souffles, timbals, omelets, filling for patty shells or pastry cases, chicken pie from left-over chicken; with celery and nuts as salad, with celery and peas as salad, with celery, apples and nuts as salad, creamed on toast, rolled in a biscuit mixture baked and served with chicken gravy, creamed with a border of rice, as a hot chicken sandwich, a club sandwich, chicken soup and as a filling for rice or potato croquettes. Turkey, goose or duck leftovers may be served in nearly all of these ways equally as well.

If one has a peach or two or three left from a can they may be used in various dishes as a garnish. Prepare an ordinary cornstarch pudding, using two tablespoonfuls of cornstarch, with three of sugar and one and one-half cupfuls of milk, a pinch of salt; cook until smooth and thick and pour into small dishes for serving. When cold place half a peach hollow side up on the mold of pudding, which, by the way, is flavored with a few drops of almond just as it is taken from the fire. Serve with a spoonful of whipped cream or with sugar and cream. Plain cooked rice may be served with such a garnish. If there is but a peach or two they may be cut in dice, added to a diced apple and twice as much celery, mixed with a little salad dressing and served as a salad.

Another dessert which may be made from a few peaches or pears is the following: Take sponge cake cut in rounds, on each place a few spoonfuls of the peach sauce or sirup, and place a peach hollow side up and sprinkle with nuts. Cover with whipped cream and serve. Pears may be served in the same way.

Sour Cream Filling for Cake.—Take one cupful each of sugar (brown), sour cream and nuts. Cook until thick. Raisins may be used instead of the nuts.

CULINARY HINTS.

Onions on Toast With Cream Sauce.—Cook the onions until tender, place on buttered toast and pour over and around a rich cream sauce. Cheese may be added, making a most nourishing dish and especially appetizing.

Onion Sauce.—Cream one-half cupful of butter with two tablespoonfuls of flour. Add slowly two cupfuls of boiling milk. Stir constantly until the mixture boils. Add four boiled onions chopped fine. Season to taste.

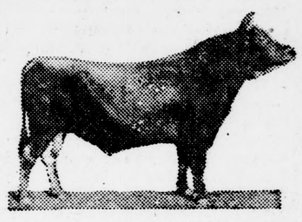
WORK OF BULL ASSOCIATION

Missouri Organization Doubled in Membership in Two Years Because of Its Usefulness.

Two years ago the United States Department of Agriculture and cooperating agencies organized a bull association in Webster county, Mo., with 31 members. Now there are twice that many members, due to the success and usefulness of the association.

Before the association was formed there were 18 bulls owned by the men who afterwards joined it. Upon the formation of the organization the number of bulls was reduced by two-thirds, because after the members had been arranged into blocks, it was found that six bulls were enough. These were much finer animals, however. Judging them by their money value, the new ones were three or four times as good as the ones they replaced, since the average investment per bull was $75 before organization, and $276 after.

Yet, owing to the smaller number of bulls needed under the co-operative arrangement, the cost per farmer was but little more. The members had on the average $43.71 invested in their inferior bulls, while the superior bulls owned by the association cost each member only $53.45. This $10 increase of cost per member meant a $200 increase of value in the individual bulls from which they now have service—one thing which accounts for the doubling of the membership of the association after running two years. The value of the calf crop will probably show a very much greater increase.



Jersey Bull—A Sire Is "More Than Half the Herd."

FARMERS MIXING OWN FEEDS

Dairymen Dissatisfied With Commercial Materials Are Turning to Co-operative Buying.

"Farmers are almost universally dissatisfied with mixed commercial feeds and are depending more on mixing their own rations," says Henry McGough, chairman of the dairy committee of the Illinois Agricultural association. He adds: "They are all interested in the co-operative buying of mill feeds such as bran, cottonseed meal and gluten and at times when there is a shortage in roughages in the purchase of alfalfa hay."

Commercial mixed feeds ought to give more satisfactory results because the manufacturers with their improved machinery for mixing, large capital and ability to purchase feeds and grains in large quantities should be able to supply a satisfactory feed at a reasonable price. Oat hulls, weed seeds, chaff and cheap molasses do not make a nourishing or satisfactory feed and their extensive use by some mixers has brought these disparaging remarks from Mr. McGough.

SUCCESS IN DAIRY FARMING

Carelessness in Breeding and Calf-Raising Is Sure to Result Disastrously to Herd.

Success in dairy farming depends to a great extent upon the careful rearing of the calves. Carelessness in breeding and calf raising is bound to result disastrously to a herd, or at least keep it at a standstill, as far as improvement is concerned. Without raising calves from which to replace discarded animals it is almost impossible to raise the average production of the herd. Purchasing cows for this purpose is a very unsatisfactory method. Cows placed on the market are almost certain to be of very ordinary grade, since a good cow whose value as a milk producer is known is not offered for sale at market price. Therefore, the dairy farmer should take every precaution in handling the young calves which are to be placed in the herd.

PRODUCTION OF DAIRY COW

Animal May Be Considered Profitable if She Yields 6,000 Pounds of Milk Each Year.

A cow may be considered profitable if she produces 6,000 pounds of milk or 200 pounds of butterfat per year. A good dairy cow should produce 8,000 pounds or more of milk or 400 pounds or more of butterfat.

BEST TYPE OF DAIRY COW

Must Be Capable of Producing Large Quantity of Milk and Butterfat Economically.

A dairy cow is one of distinct dairy type and dairy breed capable of producing a large quantity of milk and butterfat economically or at a profit, and to produce calves regularly as good or better than herself.

Cause of Ropy Milk.

Ropy milk is due to bacteria which get into the milk from outside sources and it is not always easy to locate the source.

The Combine.

Upton Sinclair said at a Pasadena tea:

"In this matter of the high cost of living there is one thing which we all have got to do. That is this: When a dealer—"

Here Mr. Sinclair struck the tea table a resounding whack with his fist.

—"When a dealer asks us an exorbitant price for an essential article then—"

The novelist's eye flashed, and he squared his jaw resolutely.

—"Then there is nothing for us to do but leave the rascal's shop and buy the essential article from another dealer on the same exorbitant terms."

SHE SUFFERED FOR FOUR LONG YEARS AFTER OPERATION

She Took Earle's Hypo-Cod and Now Recommends It. Mother Also Took This Tonic.

"I suffered from a nervous, rundown condition, due to an abdominal operation four years ago. My symptoms were bilious attacks, the formation of gas on my stomach every night on retiring, belching of wind, and the worst of all was sleeplessness and bronchitis. I secured Hypo-Cod because my mother, who had been in a rundown condition for years, took it and found it a wonderful help to her, and I thought it might help me.

"My relief through the use of this tonic was that I am not now annoyed with the gas formation during the night, am not so dreadfully troubled with sleeplessness, or bilious and the ailments previously mentioned. My nerves are much improved, which is a Godsend, for the past years were a horrible nightmare.

"I have recommended this medicine's great merits to many of my friends because it has helped me and my dear mother back to health. A sister of mine has just recovered from an operation and I have advised her to use Hypo-Cod, too, and she has consented most willingly, and I trust it will bring her health back as it has brought mother's and mine. My mother's name is Mrs. Mary A. Quinter, 227 Water St., Pottstown, Pa. My sister's name is Miss Margaret Keim, 536 19th St., Philadelphia, Pa.," declared Mrs. Hester G. Bach, 536 N. 19th St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Thousands of users, old and young, have found that Hypo-Cod is an ideal tonic, that works so quickly, is so pleasant to taste and puts you back on your feet days and weeks sooner, according to their statements. Druggists, chemists and experts assert that the formula which is on each bottle is good. Take home a bottle with you tonight and see how nicely it does the work.

Papa Missed Her, Too.

Priscilla had been to school a few days for the first time in her life when she met a friend on the street one day, who inquired about how she was getting along.

"But what does your papa say about it?" inquired the friend.

"Oh, he is kind of uneasy in his mind, too," answered Priscilla.

Why He Stayed.

Lieutenant Governor Channing Cox of Massachusetts, discussing the high cost of living in France, said the other day:

"In Paris, you know, a good pair of shoes fetched $50, and a good meal about as much.

"Well, a young lawyer started on a brief vacation trip to Paris in June, and he long overstayed his time. On his return in late September a friend who knew he was none too flush, said to him:

"'Why did you remain so long in Paris, Jim?'

"'My friends kept me there,' Jim answered.

"'Your friends? Why, Jim. I didn't know you had any friends in Paris.'

"'I haven't. My friends are all in Oshkosh, and they refused to lend me any money.'"

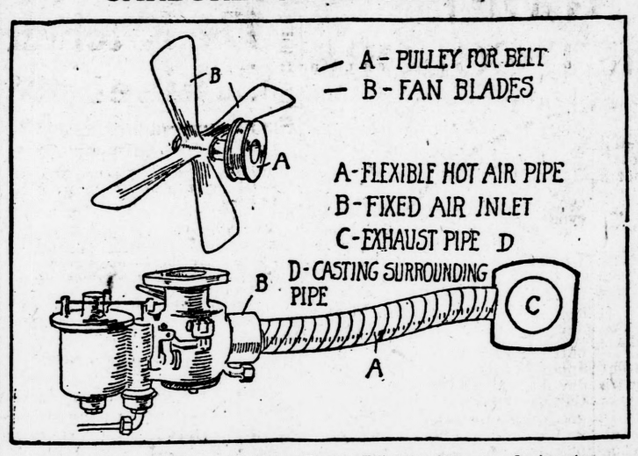
SOME HEAT IS ESSENTIAL FOR CARBURETOR IN COLD WEATHER



Arrangement of Tube Leading From Exhaust Pipe to Carburetor.

Whether you have a starter or not, a motor that is difficult to get under way is an exasperating proposition—and the arrival of cooler days and the present low grade of gasoline will make any motor difficult of initial operation. It is the absence of heat that brings about the hard starting motor, due to the difficulty of volatilizing the low grade of gasoline now on the market.

Truth is the fuel is so cold and heavy it will not break up and mix with air even if the suction of the motor raises a sufficient quantity for ordinary purposes. Most of the cars now built are fitted with hot air tubes leading from the exhaust pipe to the fixed air inlet of the carburetor, thus permitting only hot air to enter, which aids in gasfying the gasoline.

This hot air tube will be of no particular avail while the engine is dead cold, as, for instance, when it has been standing all night, but is of material advantage in economical running and in starting. The common practice is to have a hollow casting clamped to the exhaust pipe and from the interior of this is run a flexible metal pipe to the fixed air intake of the carburetor, thus supplying warm air at all times and aiding in making better mixture and more economy in the matter of fuel consumption.

Heat Generates Gas.

The warmer the air the more a given quantity of gasoline is transferred into gas, and so more economy is insured. Besides, it has been found that in even cool weather it is almost impossible to so adjust a carburetor as to permit the motor to be throttled down as well as it should be, and again the hot air pipe comes into good use.

Most of the carburetor manufacturers or agents have these pipes ready for instant installation, and as they cost little, no motorist should be without one. As a matter of fact, a large section hose can be used so long as some arrangement is made whereby it can be secured at the exhaust pipe end.

A tin can could be slipped over the exhaust pipe and the hose inserted in a hole in the can. This would serve the purpose just as well as the flexible pipe, except it would be difficult to keep in place and would tend to rattle.

Fans Cause Trouble.

Efficient cooling of a motor depends somewhat upon the condition of the fan, or more particularly, the fan blades. An instance is known where a motorist had gone over his car and even had a repairman investigate to find out why the motor heated. It was found that three out of the four fan blades had in some manner become straightened out, so as to pull no air through the radiator, although the fan was being driven by the belt as it was designed to do. As soon as the blades were turned to their original position and air was pulled through the radiator there was no trouble about keeping the motor cool.

Clean the Fuel Tank.

Don't overlook the gasoline tank in the matter of cleaning, for at some time it will be found this is a necessary thing. Here was a recent cause that baffled even the experts, and it all came about because the owner ran out of gasoline. That was not a great misfortune, for he happened to be near a supply station and the tank was refilled. But the motor would not start, although a few moments before it had been running. Gasoline would not flow to the carburetor, although the tank had just been filled.

When the gasoline ran out, became entirely exhausted, even down to the last drop, it carried into the gasoline feed pipe some little particle of refuse or dirt that previously had been floating on the top of the gasoline. This found its way into the pipe and clogged it, so as to prevent a flow to the carburetor. The remedy was simple enough when the difficulty was discovered. The gasoline pipe was removed and the particle of dirt blown out. It is because of this that it is essential that the tank be cleaned out every once in a while.

INDICATOR GIVES DIRECTION

Convenient Means Provided for Facilitating Passage of Car Through Congested City.

The Scientific American in illustrating and describing a direction indicator, the invention of J. E. Mayhall of Covington, Ky., says:

The primary object of the invention is to provide a convenient means for facilitating driving a vehicle, preferably a motor vehicle in a congested city or in fact anywhere it is desirable to give a warning to a vehicle either approaching from the front or rear, the direction which the vehicle on which the indicator is installed is to take, the device being conveniently operated by the chauffeur.

PLAN FOR REPLACING BOLTS

Often Very Difficult to Get Those Running Through Frame Channel Back in Place.

Bolts running through the frame channel are often very difficult to get in place once they are removed. An easy method where these bolts are drilled is to take a cotter pin and run a piece of wire through the hole in the bolt. The bolt may then be drawn through the hole.

TROUBLE IN IGNITION COILS

Effort to Secure Greater Efficiency Is Likely to Burn Out the Condenser.

The ignition coils on the market are made for the voltage that is obtained by using five or six dry cells. To connect a greater number of coils in series in order to secure greater efficiency is very likely to burn out the condenser and ruin the coil.

Indication of Cross.

When the ammeter shows a rate of charge or discharge very much higher than usual it may be accepted as an indication that there is a cross somewhere, so that the battery is not getting the current intended for it.

Repairing Tear in Top.

To mend a tear in the top it is best to use woolen yarn to draw the edges together, after which a patch of material similar to that of the top is applied with rubber cement, set by the vulcanizer.

WEAK VALVE SPRINGS

Weakening of the springs which close the valves is a common cause of faulty engine operation. Whenever the valves are taken out the springs should be examined to see that they are all of the same length, or rather that all of the inlet set are of the same length and all of the exhaust, as the exhaust springs will probably be a little longer than the others. If one spring is shorter than the others in its set it should be stretched or else a metal plate must be put under it to bring tension up to equality with its fellows.

Better Roads

ETTER TO BUILD UP ROADS

ontinuous Care Has Been Largely Responsible for Improved Highways in Maryland.

It is better to build a cheap road and keep it in good condition by adequate maintenance than to build the most expensive highway and permit it to deteriorate for want of care, say officials of the bureau of public roads of the United States Department of Agriculture.

Maryland, which has one of the finest systems of improved highways in the United States, if not the best, has consistently followed this practice. The originally improved roads in Maryland were comparatively inexpensive, costing only what the taxpayers were willing to pay for. The first few years the average cost was less than $10,000 a mile. In some cases the work entailed considerable grading and drainage, but in others it amounted simply to resurfacing the old turnpikes, which had already been graded and drained.

Patching a Macadamized Road in Maryland.

Generally the roads built at that time were macadam, 12 feet wide and six inches thick. Soon the width was increased to 14 feet. Later many were widened still farther, some very successfully, by adding concrete shoulders on each side of the existing macadam. This method of improving roads makes it possible for traffic to continue unimpeded on the road while the work is going on.

The macadam roads in Maryland have given very good satisfaction, but continuous care has been largely responsible for their success. The roads are constantly patrolled and no hole of any size is allowed to go unrepaired. Material for patching is kept at convenient points along the road for the use of the patrolman. From a relatively small investment in an admittedly low-type road it builds up a better one from year to year, always conserving the bulk of the previous investment.

KEEP ROADS OPEN IN WINTER

Federal Highway Commission Suggests That Special Efforts Be Made by State Officials.

It is suggested by the federal highway council that state and county highway departments make a special effort to keep the roads clear of snow during the winter months and thus permit of uninterrupted traffic. The transportation of certain commodities is really more important during the winter than in summer and it is then that the roads are more difficult to pass over. Then, too, the rural mail must be carried whether roads are good or bad, and when the snow drifts several feet deep over the roads the life of the rural mail carrier is anything but pleasant. As the snow melts it transforms many roads into a mire that is almost impassable. On any road, no matter how good, there is a tendency for the melting snow to soften the subgrade and loosen the base under the wearing surface, thus causing great damage to the road.

Road officials could do nothing better than to keep their equipment busy in the winter removing the snow from the road surfaces. It is one form of maintenance work that is very essential in lengthening the life and usefulness of the highways.

BENEFIT TO SUBURBAN LAND

One Advantage of Road Improvement Would Be to Open Up Territory for Homesteads.

Another change in the use of land which may result from road improvement, especially near towns and cities, is to make it available for suburban development. This might better be termed increasing the home value of the land, and it will be found to apply where the land is retained for its original uses as well as where, following road improvement, it is utilized so as to yield a higher return on agricultural products. The home value of land is one to be given consideration.

Roadside Tree Planting.

Roadside tree planting had best not be in formal rows, but in groups or as a specimen tree at irregular intervals. Street trees should be in straight rows of the same species for ten or twelve blocks.

Profit in Winter Eggs.

The profit is made on winter eggs. Almost any hen will lay in the spring, but prices are usually lowest then, and it requires a good many eggs to pay a hen's keep in these days of the high cost of living.

Highways Are Necessity.

Commercial highways are a necessity for the development of the country as well as for quick transportation of materials and for the lowering of the cost of living.

Pullets for Winter Eggs.

The pullets are heavier layers during their first year than hens and for that reason should be depended on for the bulk of the winter egg supply.

No "Gowfer."

Lord Haig confesses that whatever conceit he may have had regarding his prowess on the golf links was killed by the remark of a professional at St. Andrews, who had watched him play.

"Weel, sir," he said, at the end of one round, "it's a guid job for us a' that ye're a better sodger than ye are a gowfer."

WHY DRUGGISTS RECOMMEND SWAMP-ROOT

For many years druggists have watched with much interest the remarkable record maintained by Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder medicine.

It is a physician's prescription.

Swamp-Root is a strengthening medicine. It helps the kidneys, liver and bladder do the work nature intended they should do.

Swamp-Root has stood the test of years. It is sold by all druggists on its merit and it should help you. No other kidney medicine has so many friends.

Be sure to get Swamp-Root and start treatment at once.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.—Adv.

"Yes; a regular flower barrel."

The Inevitable Tune.

"Daddy," pleaded the sweet young thing, "can't I have an automobile? You can buy one for a song."

"Yes," grunted her harassed parent, "and I know what that song will be—'Over the Hills to the Poorhouse.'"—American Legion Weekly.

Cuticura Soothes Itching Scalp

On retiring gently rub spots of dandruff and itching with Cuticura Ointment. Next morning shampoo with Cuticura Soap and hot water. Make them your every-day toilet preparations and have a clear skin and soft, white hands.—Adv.

The Trouble.

"Everybody about that bank seems to be catching cold. Is it damp?"

"No; but there are so many drafts about it."

A man is foolish to borrow trouble when there are so many people anxious to give it away.

JITNEY TO OUST RICKSHAW

March of Progress in Japan Means End of Vehicle So Dear to Heart of Tourist.

That familiar ancient relic, rickshaw, a slender carriage drawn by man-power, seems now on way to its deathbed, to the great wail of curious tourists. The existing narrow and bad roads alone are keeping up its life. Whether for good or for ill, the growing severity of the world-wide struggle for existence has been compelling the reluctant Nipponese to forsake many of the antiquated things and institutions that had long been dear to their hearts. Esthetically disposed men like Lafcadio Hearn would have Japan remain forever "picturesque" and curse the skyscrapers and factory chimneys; but a nation, like an individual, must live, and live decently too. Present age is no doubt an age of machinery; and no man-power can cope with the general tide of the world, and hence the mechanization of almost everything. Neither can man-power pretend to rival with mechanical force—it must give way to a roller, an automobile, and a cinema. And rickshaw now must give way to jitney. It had its day. But the rickshaw men do not think so. They have the love and respect of their trade. When lately the city of Yokohama granted a license to a big jitney bus company, the rickshaw men attempted a desperate effort to smother the project at the outset, but it proved in vain. And numerous baby-motor cars, allowing two passengers, will soon be speedily carrying people around at the rate of 25 sen per mile.—East and West News.

CRETE ONCE A GREAT POWER

Mistress of the Sea When King Minos Ruled—Remarkable Laws Under Which People Lived.

Minos, king of Crete, exercised a preponderating power on the sea; he drove out the barbarous Carians from the Cyclades, and exterminated piracy which among the Greeks had been openly professed; he kept the people of the coasts in awe of him, and at the same time forced them to pay him tribute.

Crete was advantageously situated to become mistress of the sea, but at length a confederacy arose which put an end to her dominion. Minos wished to render the Cretans mild and gentle in their manners. To attain this object he allowed free indulgence, Plato says, to licentious excess, even of the most flagitious kind, hoping that the refinements of gallantry would mitigate the native ferocity of his subjects.

As individuals the Cretans possessed eminent skill in military affairs, while the laws which they adopted prevented the state from undertaking any great enterprise abroad. They elected ten cosmes, or regulators, to govern in peace and war, and when the period of their office was completed they remained members of the legislature. The judges were all men of advanced age, and young men were never allowed to propose a change in the law, and all proposals were made in the senate, and secretly. Slaves tilled the soil, and the citizens ate together in public companies, while the country was divided into twelve portions for agriculture and business.

Charge for Fuse Replacement.

It has been the general custom among the electrical companies of this country to make free replacement of the fuses which are blown out from time to time but there is now a general tendency among these corporations to make a charge for this service. It is necessary to have men ready at all hours, especially at night, to answer calls so that the service may be restored with the least possible delay and the expense of this has been found to be a burden which it is now proposed to relieve themselves of by making a charge. Some companies which hesitate to take this step are urging their patrons to lay in a supply of fuses which are sold by the company at cost and in case of a blowout they can make the renewal themselves.—Exchange.

Ambition Lives.

It is an unusual thing to see a mother and all of her children attending school together, but such is the spectacle which may be witnessed at the summer term of the Eastern Kentucky state normal school at Richmond, Ky. This family of students, consisting of mother, two sons and two daughters, hail from Barbourville, Ky. The mother, Mrs. E. P. Gray, is the wife of one of the best-known chautauqua entertainers, who is now in the west on the platform. She brought her children to the school to take the course and decided, after reaching the institution, to engage in study herself and will take a course along with her four children.

Meeting at Glasgow

A meeting of the Community Club, of Glasgow, was held in the Public School Building, on Thursday, January 13th, 1921, at 8 P. M. The meeting was opened by singing "Our Delaware". A prayer was read in concert, after which a short but interesting program was rendered by the pupils. The teacher, Miss May Brown, gave a reading upon better attendance in the schools. A short time was then devoted to business matters of the club.

The following officers were elected: Miss Katherine Bolton, Chairman of the Membership Committee; Mrs. Richard Brown, Chairman of the Social Committee; Mrs. W. Lamont McElwee, Chairman of the Press Publicity Committee.

The meeting was then placed in the hands of the Social Committee for the social hour.

MRS. W. LAMONT MCELWEE,

Once in Awhile Your Blood Clogs and Your Vitality Runs Down

THEN TAKE PEPTO-MANGAN

You'll Pick Up Again Quickly With Plenty of Red Blood Corpuscles

Physicians nowadays take a blood test when you are run down. They count the red corpuscles in your blood. If these are too few they give you a tonic for your blood. It happens right along. They are always on the lookout for indications of weak blood.

Why? Because they know when your blood is weak your resistance to disease is low. Your vitality and energy quickly run down.

You can tell when your blood is weak. You look pale, feel tired. You are not ill, but you don't feel right. You don't want to do things. That is the time to take the well-known tonic, Pepto-Mangan.

Pepto-Mangan builds red blood corpuscles. Physicians have prescribed it for thirty years.

Pepto-Mangan is sold in liquid and tablet form. The medicinal value is exactly the same. Take either kind you prefer. But be sure you get the genuine Pepto-Mangan—"Gude's." The full name, "Gude's Pepto-Mangan," should be on the package.

Price Reductions EXTRAORDINARY!

"KEEPING goods moving" is our motto. To do this at a time when all business is slowing up, we have reduced to the new lowered price level all goods in our Store, no matter what they cost originally.

We believe goods are now as low as they will be for at least six months to come. This being so, we believe it will be wise for our patrons to buy freely, at least for all present needs.

Our very heavily cut stocks, CUT HALF IN TWO many of them, certainly offer extraordinary inducements for immediate buying.

Here are few illustrations of our greatly reduced prices.

Winter Suits, Dresses and Coats

These articles, all first class in materials, and well made offer the latest styles, that were priced at $25.00 to $50.00, have been reduced 50%—ONE HALF

BARGAIN SHOES

We have yet a number of pairs of fine ladies' Shoes, small sizes that were sold for $4.50 to $6.00 are now selling for $1.50.

This price is far below what we paid for these high grade Shoes.

MILLINERY

In our Millinery Department we have made even greater reductions, all goods being offered for LESS THAN ONE HALF!

We say again these amazing "cuts" in prices extend to every article in our Store, and it will pay anyone to take advantage of them at once.
